Not illustrated. 1908 Excerpt: .inspector, is employed and needed for house numbering and minor matters, such as dangerous cellar doors, defective downspouts, improper use of frame sheds, signs, awnings, and numerous complaints. INSPECTORS OK ELEVATORS AND FIRli ESCAPES. Two inspectors are detailed on elevators and fire escapes and their report shows the enormous amount of work necessary to keep up to the requirements and at the same time assist in the inspection of engines, boilers, gasoline tanks, heating apparatus, besides inspection of hotels, theaters, halls, churches, and all buildings used for purposes requiring licenses where public safety is concerned. If an accident occurs on an elevator the inspector will, with seeming excuse, point to the numerous special duties not connected with elevators which take his time from legitimate work, the principal digression being this year 611 inspections of heating apparatus, motors, gasoline tanks, theaters, hotels, etc. This year the new law relating to fire escapes would require the entire time of these inspectors, as it virtually means a house-to-house inspection of all buildings but private residences, which means that about one-sixth of all the 70,000 buildings, or nearly 12,000, must be examined to ascertain whether they come within the law. But as these inspectors have nearly 600 elevators to look after, this fire-escape work must be done by some other inspectors, as no provision was made in the law for extra help. FIRE-ESCAPE LAW. A temporary inspector has been employed under the appropriation for that purpose and assigned to the...
