Not illustrated. 1749 Excerpt: . into Florida, and the relation of these facts to each other, is a confirmation of the truth of both, W to the young old man (I use the author s own words) and desired him, with the utmost civility, to give him, if possible, a more distinct answer with respect to his age. Upon this, the Indian chief beckoned to some who were waiting at a distance to approach. When they were near him, he struck his hand upon his thigh twice, and then laid it upon-the heads of two old men; after that he struck his thigh again, and laid his hand upon others, and repeating this action five times, and then placed his descendants before them, that they might consider them at leisure. They did so, and by observing the difference of their looks, the colour of their hair, and other circumstances, they conjectured, that it might be very possible, that the younger of the two old men, might be upwards of two hundred. This is the relation I promised, delivered precisely in the terms of my author, and I look upon it as the fullest and most authentic account of the extent (c)f human life, from the natural advantages of a fine climate, great temperance, continual exercise, V. and renders it very evident, that leng-life simply considered, and without the assistance of some method, either to retard, or to qualify its inconveniencics, ought by no means to be esteemed a blessing; for...
